In 1860 the census reports Georgia as producing during that year, manufactures of the value of $1,481,418; 953,915 pounds of hone; 546,749 gallons of mo-lasses; 5,439,766 pounds of butter; 1,765,214 bushels of peas and beans; 919,318 peunds of tobacco; 1,231,817 bushels of oats; as having live stock to the value of $38,372,734; as having 2,036,116 head of swine, and 512,618

Ah! one need but study and contrast figures to see how poor Georgia is and why she is poor. With a largely increased population our products have diminished in a far greater ratio, until we have ceased to feed ourselves, and now spend our cotton product in buying sustenance, which the population (speaking of it as a whole) are too indolent to raise by their own labor. It is a bad showing, and never will be permanently improved until the stern flat of God Almighty is brought, by necessity—the operation of public opinion, and laws and police embodying the same, to every man's door, and white and black are made to feel that they must work or starve.

And these figures also tell us what our so-called big corn crops in Georgia now amount to. We consume, say, about forty million bushels of corn, and this forty million bushels of corn, and this year perhaps, we will raise fifteen million bushels—leaving us twenty-five million bushels to buy at a cost of twenty-five million dollars—more but not less. Well, we will raise say $50,000 bales of cotton at a net fifty dollars the bag, bringing us, say $27,500,000, and when we settle the corn bills we shall have a balance of $2,500,000 in band wherewith to pay our good deal too round, sain we have the mortification of feeling that they squint at actual facts quite too directly, and that is the real reason why we are all broken and never can be otherwise, till we cease to buy our bread and meat and learn to to buy our bread and meat and learn to produce it every year out of the ground. Now, this will be another year when planters will "raise enough corn to do them," and miss it by fifty per cent. The foundation of pecuniary ease and independence must be faid in abundance of all sorts—in a general fatness of supply in which we need go abroad for nothing to eat, either for man or beast. When our farms abound, not only in corn, but in all that abundance which corn produces—in fat poultry, muttons and pigs,

The Sub-Committee appointed by the joint committee of the City Council and the Water Works Commissioners met last night. After a free consultation it was agreed to réport that in the Franklin & Eichberg matter Council had no jurisdiction. The committee reported, that in view of the fact that all contracts had been awarded, many contractors commenced work and others ready to begin, that all opposition to the further prosecution of the work cease.

Now we have sources of irritation growing out of the consequences or results of the war, which will require all the intelligence and moderation, not only of leading men, but of all the people, to prevent calminating in the renewal of bloodshed, and the probable overthrow and total loss of civil liberty.

Just laws and an honest administration can searcely be looked for under our reconstruction amendments.

The abolition mania had, like a contagious disease, spread over the North, furnishing fuel to secession proclivities, which spread over the South, until the clash of steel and the smoke of battle told the sad tale of civil war.

Mow, with these lessons before us, what can we expect as the result, since the number of uneducated and unthinking voters has been largely increased?

If the white people, with education, were unable to shield themselves from civil strife and war, how can we expect enduring peacet when the germs of strife were intensified by inviting the negro into the demoralizations
